

Palo Alto Stanford Heritage
Neighborhood Preservation Award
352 Stanford Avenue

Presented to

Heather Young

Heather Young Architects

Although not originally built for occupancy, the attic apartment of this 1906 Colonial Revival home was removed to integrate the second floor into the main house structurally, functionally and proportionally. Small dark rooms were removed creating an open floor plan with a new central stair under an existing dormer. Historic elements were reinforced without changing their appearance by hollowing them and adding steel inside.

November 7, 2021

Palo Alto Stanford Heritage
Neighborhood Preservation Award
352 Stanford Avenue

Presented to

Tim Shockey

Heather Young Architects

Although not originally built for occupancy, the attic apartment of this 1906 Colonial Revival home was removed to integrate the second floor into the main house structurally, functionally and proportionally. Small dark rooms were removed creating an open floor plan with a new central stair under an existing dormer. Historic elements were reinforced without changing their appearance by hollowing them and adding steel inside.

November 7, 2021

